2. APPLICABILITY AND SCOPE

This Directive:

2.1. Applies to the Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD), the Military Departments (including the National Guard and Reserve components), the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Joint Staff, the Defense Agencies, and the DoD Field Activities (hereafter referred to collectively as "the DoD Components").

2.2. Applies to existing, revised, and new information requirements (internal DoD, inter-Agency, and public reporting requirements) and the systems and processes necessary to support them. All information and reporting systems and all techniques (electronic and manual) for collecting, recording, maintaining, and disseminating information for all functional areas are included under its provisions unless specifically exempted by reference (c).

2.3. Encompasses the information requirements developed in support of all management functions, unless excluded in reference (d) and includes information collected to satisfy statutory, congressional, and other inter-Agency imposed information requirements; the collection of information from sources external to the Federal Government; and information collected internally within the Department of Defense.

3. DEFINITIONS

Terms used in this Directive are defined in enclosure 2.

4. POLICY

4.1. Ensuring that sufficient information is available to achieve military effectiveness and management efficiency is a basic command and management responsibility. As a fundamental policy, however, the burden associated with the collection and reporting of this information must be controlled and minimized. The management of reports internally prescribed by the DoD Component must include provision for setting annual goals, consistent with critical mission needs, to reduce the number or frequency of reports.

4.2. The central ingredient in information management is the user's responsibility and accountability for ensuring that information requirements are valid, accurate, and essential to the mission of the user's organization.

4.2.1. Information requirements should be examined to avoid both duplication and unnecessary generation of data. Because the creation or collection of information requires the allocation of scarce resources, the user must first ascertain that the required data are not already available from other sources.

4.2.2. Statistical sampling techniques and information technology should be emphasized as approaches for minimizing reporting workloads.

4.2.3. In the development and operational life cycle of an automated information system, care shall be taken to ensure that information needs are clearly identified and that reports to be generated by the automated system represent cost-effective use of resources, as required by DoD Directive 8120.1 (reference (g)).

4.3. Information collected from the public (individuals, businesses, and other private institutions) and State and local governments shall also be minimized, accounted for, and controlled. Section 1320 of 5 CFR (reference (h)) directs that public information collections be submitted to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for approval, and that an annual information collection budget of burden hours be developed and submitted to the OMB.

4.4. To ensure optimum effectiveness and economy in the development of information requirements, the following guidance shall be applied:

4.4.1. Each new or revised information requirement shall be subjected to a cost analysis. An estimate or actual cost of obtaining the information shall be developed by the requester in accordance with DoD 8910.1-M (reference (d)). A full cost-benefit analysis shall be required for all information collections and systems that are considered to be major by a senior information resources management (IRM) official or representative.

4.4.2. Each item of data in the information requirement shall be evaluated and screened against data in existing information collections to determine whether such information can satisfy the requirement. Information requirements shall be designed to meet only essential needs and be in the minimal frequency feasible, with reasonable due dates. The number of copies to be prepared shall be held to a minimum. Repetitive one-time information requirements may not be imposed when the need for a recurring information requirement is indicated.

4.4.3. Information requirements shall comply with existing standard data elements and codes published in DoD 5000.12-M (reference (i)). If required data elements and codes do not exist, they shall be standardized, when appropriate, consistent with DoD Directive 8320.1 (reference (j)).

4.4.4. Internal DoD information requirements shall be approved and symbolized; i.e., assigned an information requirement control symbol at the organizational Component level generating the requirement.

4.4.5. Information requirements that have not been properly approved and symbolized shall not be honored. The office requesting the data shall be notified that an information requirement control symbol must be obtained before the data can be collected.

4.4.6. Information requirements that involve the collection of personal information on individuals require special handling under DoD Directive 5400.11 (reference (k)). Information or data included in the proposed information requirement shall be accessible to the public, only as prescribed by DoD Directive 5400.7 (reference (l)).

4.4.7. On an individual case-by-case basis, special one-time, high priority, or time-urgent requirements may be approved and symbolized without being subjected to in-depth review and analysis, provided a statement of urgency is included with the request for approval document. It will be the responsibility of the requester to complete the request for approval document retroactively, including the appropriate justification and cost estimates.

4.5. To ensure that ongoing information requirements are still valid and adequate, users shall perform assessments of their ongoing information requirements no less frequently than every 3 years. Actions shall be taken to accomplish modifications, cancellations, or new initiatives identified during the review. The DoD Components should consider the assignment of expiration dates to reports as a means of distributing the workload of relicensing reports.

5. RESPONSIBILITIES

5.1. The Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence, as the DoD senior official responsible for implementing Pub.L. No. 96-511 (1980) (reference (c)), shall, consistent with the guidance prescribed by the OMB:
